Nature Connection and Learning Beyond the Classroom

"I realised the real importance of place, of taking the classroom outside and using story to develop belonging, engagement and a sense of purpose in students."

Teacher Feedback

The latest evidence based research has found that teaching in nature deepens engagement with the curriculum, changes attitudes to school and awakens a strong sense of wellbeing, curiosity and agency.

Course Focus:

This course is an exciting professional learning journey designed to inspire you to slow down and reflect on your teaching practice.

Course Structure and duration: (4 Workshops = 20 hours onsite + practice at school)

- 3 Professional Development Workshops will be held at PEEC (term 1, 3 and 4) with all catering provided. The other workshop will be held in Karawatha Forest (term 2) and participants will need to bring their own lunch on this day.

Course Aims:

This course will grow your understanding and expertise as a Connected Teacher as you:

- Develop your skills as a place responsive educator (at PEEC and Karawatha Forest) with a view to connecting your students to natural places in your school and beyond
- Experience a suite of teaching strategies and their practical application with your class (our PEEC Experiential Teaching Tools enhance student learning and wellbeing through story and play, attentiveness and deep reflective responding)
- Gain insights regarding First Nations' wisdom and the power of Dadirri
- Experience deep connection in nature and improved well-being as part of a reflective community
